CIACO NID 81 [REDACTED]

December 31, 1981

Whatever is in Jaruzelski's plan, there is little expectation among Polish officials that martial law will end soon. Several officials told [REDACTED] that they expect it to last at least several months. The government's announcement yesterday that local elections scheduled for February will be postponed gives credence to their belief. One official believes there will continue to be a gradual easing of restrictions, and he added that internal communications might be restored some time in January because the cutoff is seriously hindering enterprises. [REDACTED]

The government yesterday announced the easing of more restrictions, including a temporary lifting of the curfew for tonight, resumption of ferry services to several Scandinavian countries, and the opening of classes for some university students on 8 January. [REDACTED]

Soviet Comments

A TASS report from Warsaw claimed that the situation in Poland remains "calm and well-ordered" and that work is becoming "especially" well coordinated at Poland's largest plants, including the Katowice iron and steel works. TASS also cited Polish reports that coal production is rising. [REDACTED]

Meanwhile, Soviet television last night quoted a statement attributed to Polish Government spokesmen that reaffirmed the leading role of the Communist Party under martial law. Moscow's continuing attention to this issue suggests deep concern over the ideological questions raised by the military takeover in Poland, and over the likelihood that it will take some time to correct the disarray within the party. Moscow has not reported the decision to postpone a session of the party Central Committee, originally slated to be held next week. [REDACTED]

There has been no significant change in the military situation in and around Poland. [REDACTED]
